

My latest work is a series of big-screen film installations inspired by London as a dynamic and amazing metropolis. The films follow walks through London and show what it's like to live in such a 21st-century city. I took my camera to film the chaos of Soho on a Friday night, as well as London's fascinating Victorian cemeteries such as Nunhead and Brompton which are like lost worlds. I've been hugely inspired by London's street markets such as Ridley Road and Brixton market. Also the Notting Hill Carnival where you get this incredible mix of cultures and people.
